

Apple tragedy

Once a young teacher Mr. Wozniak who taught economics got a job at Lazarski University. He liked his work and could easily find a common language with students. Mr. Wozniak noticed that students eat apples very often: for breakfast, lunch and dinner. He considered this a rather strange phenomenon, but he did not give it any importance. Unfortunately, poor teacher was unaware of the terrible history of the Lazarski University...

What he didn't know, however, was that many years ago the university had not paid for a shipment of apples. The farmer was incredibly angry with the university and cursed him. Due to the curse, a huge apple tree grew under the university, which attracted students with its apples. Since then, the university has been looking for people who could remove the curse, spent a lot of money on this, but everything was unsuccessful.

At the end of October, he had a blockage at work, he came early and left closer to the night. And on the night of October 31, when Mr. Wozniak was about to go home, he heard strange sounds coming from the corridors of the university. After leaving the office, he decided to check what caused these sounds and went to the source of the sound. The sounds led him to the door of the old basement. Going down inside, he saw a crowd of students who were standing and eating apples. He was incredibly surprised and scared because at such a time all the students should already be at home. Gathering up courage, he found the strength to carefully pass through the crowd, but what he saw there, he was shocked.

A huge crowd of students stood around the old apple tree, which inspired fear in his eyes. Apples periodically fell from the apple tree, which the students plucked from each other and ate. There was also a huge Halloween pumpkin hanging from the apple tree. As soon as the teacher touched it, it asked him: "Do you like apples?" in a terrifying voice, after which the students grabbed the teacher and began to force apples into him until he stopped breathing. Since then, Lazarski University has not been able to find a teacher in economics...
